

- Have an employee who hasn't chosen a super fund?

18 October 2017

If your employees haven't provided their super fund information, you will need to make their super guarantee payments into your employer-nominated or default fund by the required due dates.

As an employer, you must nominate your default fund and make sure that it is:

- a complying fund that meets requirements and obligations under super law
- a MySuper product registered by the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority.

You should contact the fund you have chosen before offering it as a default fund.

Next step:

- Use Super Fund LookupExternal Link to check whether your nominated fund is complying
